

Rosenberg Fountain - Central Park

Businessman and philanthropist Henry Rosenberg bequeathed $30,000 for public water fountains for "man and beast." Sculptor John Massey Rhind of New York designed seventeen fountains for the city. They were completed in 1898 and made of granite and bronze. The above fountain was one of the most ornate. It was moved from Central Park to the southwest corner of 21st and Ball.

Image courtesy of Rosenberg Library, Galveston, Texas RL84.202.03.